SATURDAY, - - - APRIL 26, 1856.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ADVERTISE.

If you wish to command a fair share of our readers custom, now is the time to advertise. Spring is upon us, too, and everybody is looking around to find where they can buy to the best advantage. Don't expect them to go from street to another. Hundreds have not time, and they read the advertisements in the Democrat and go directly to buy. If your advertisement is not in the Democrat, you may lose many chances to sell. Hundreds read our paper every day. Our circulation in the city is increasing very rapidly, and in the country at an unprecedented rate.

The Democrat has the largest circulation west of the mountains among Democratic papers, and, at the present rate of increase, will soon have more subscribers than any paper published in the valley of the Mississippi. Our terms are moderate to prompt men. Every business man owes it to himself to increase his business as much as possible, and the best way to accomplish that end, is to advertise in the Democrat, which is universally read in the city and country.

Some of the people on Main street, as well as elsewhere in this city, are getting very tired of politics and political papers. They have come to the conclusion that they could get along much better without papers than with them. We are not surprised at this. It is only wonderful that they were not tired of such politics as theirs long ago; and it is still more wonderful that they have not conceived a disgust for such a political paper as they have been in the habit of reading and worshipping. It is a terrible symptom that have now weary of politics; and we assure them that we are as tired of their politics as they can be, and sensible, law-abiding people will feel greatly relieved when they learn that they have abandoned the trade in such politics as they have been experimenting upon. Still, they may rest assured that if they do n't attend to politics, somebody else will attend to the business for them, and perhaps to their cost.

Policies were done up in this city last August, at the cost of Louisville, and the business is likely to be continued at the public expense. They need not hope to get along here in business when the rights of person and property are not secure; when population is driven away by mobs, and the reputation of the city destroyed. They may dislike the unpalatable truth of the Democrat; but if they expect to escape what is more unpalatable still, they had better heed them. The misfortune now is, that you gave no heed in time; that you took no action when it might have been effective; that you committed policies to the worst of men, and saw Louisville in consequence deluged with blood and shame. The fact is, policies were left to a political paper and its trained militia; responsible men did nothing, except perhaps to chuckle at the prospect of political success, without naming the cost. Then they laughed over crimes black as midnight, and expected to slide along as if no enormities had been committed; but the consequences have not been fatter to the pocket.

There is something the matter with Louisville. All our neighboring cities are rejoicing in prosperity—population is increasing, and trade and business going on to an extent unknown during any previous year of their history; but Louisville is not, as every one knows; the very process by which we suffer is still going on, and if not stopped we shall have a still worse account to give twelve months hence. To some people political papers are not of much use. They don't know falsehood from truth, and don't care much for one more than the other. To such, the Democrat was of use last August, for they did n't heed it, and it is of no use now. They are determined not to believe the facts that are before their own eyes, because they are not agreeable; so they flatter themselves with falsehoods, and have a fancy that they will go along just as well. They will be disappointed, and then they will get tired of politics again, and abuse newspapers more than ever. To such bigots and callousheads politics and political papers are of small account; other people must defend their rights for them, and ignore their opposition and stupidity.

Douglas is a fortunate man; he is the object of the especial abuse of the whole Abolition cohorts, led on by Greeley and Prentiss. First Greeley, then Prentiss, and then Prentiss and Greeley again. The latter being at Washington, and seeing Douglas daily, gives him the contents of his pop-gum daily; Prentiss lets off his effusions at intervals. They don't agree, however—they don't play the same tune. Greeley is obliged to acknowledge the ability of the Senator from Illinois; he is on the ground, and crowded houses witness the conflict between Douglas and the champions of Abolitionism. The latter are uniformly worsted in the fight, and a crowd of spectators, shrewd judges of such encounters, know who comes off with the laurels. Greeley says it too. It will not therefore do to disparage the man's ability who always makes his cause appear the better. Greeley gets a rage, runs to his room, sits down, and tries to explain how the victory was in fact so apparently on the wrong side, when it ought to have been otherwise. He thinks Douglas is a very bad man, and as he is wicked, he has a devilish way of fighting that's not fair, and so fixes up facts as to make lies out of them to suit his purpose against the Sharpe's rife Abolitionists. On the other hand, Prentiss gives out that Douglas is a small affair, and treats him as a full measure of bilingious and low-down abuse.

If Prentiss and Greeley, or Greeley and Prentiss, could only succeed in breaking down Douglas, they would be canonized in the Abolition calendar, and their birthdays handed down amongst the holidays of Abolitionists. There is nobody hated by Abolitionists with so holy an indignation as this same man Douglas. It is very fortunate for him that he is thus hated. It is the best passport amongst National and patriotic men he can have in either section of the Union. It is a wonder to us that they have never thought of praising him; that would be the unkindest cut they could give him. It would excite suspicions of him that it would be hard to allay. We should not make the suggestion lest they might adopt it; only it is too late; they have committed themselves to far.

The Abolitionists at Washington would be exceedingly gratified to believe their brother Prentiss when he disparages Douglas, but they are incredulous on that point, and must have some way to strip him of a character he has acquired in his conflicts at that place before they can believe it. If he is weak, how does he manage to extort such shrinks from all Abolitionists by his blows, from Greeley down to Prentiss. His weakness looks so like power that it is mistaken for the latter by the whole Senate, the spectators, and the country. It is not surprising, then, that the brethren are incredulous as to the outgiving of their brother Prentiss. He will not do their cause as much good as he might by such nonsense; Greeley ought to talk. Prentiss out and talk to him; but perhaps he thinks the course of the latter will do here in Kentucky.

A gentleman writing from Bloomfield, Louis, under date of 17th inst., states that "at our recent election for judge of the district court, the Know-Nothings polled 700 votes less in Davis County in this State than they did last fall. The Kentucky Horticultural Society also meets at the Exchange at 11 o'clock."

The individual who assures the Paris Citizen that the business of this city is better than it ever has been, and that the course of the Democrat is disapproved and denounced by the members of its own party, is either a knave or a fool. We are inclined to think he is both.

The editor of the Journal is exercised a good deal about our publishing the names of men who have undertaken openly to proscribe us. He has told several falsehoods already, and published another yesterday morning. He says that amongst those who have proscribed us were men of both parties. This is false. There is not a Democrat amongst them; if there is, let the editor name him. The Democratic party here unanimously sustain our course. As any one of them, if there be any doubt about it; amongst them are the largest property holders in this city, and its oldest inhabitants. It is a base expedient of the Journal to give out that our course is condemned by men of our own party. It is even circulated on the streets that men of our party have come to us personally and remonstrated with us—an infamous, contemptible lie. They have done just the contrary, and will say so anywhere and everywhere. They know they are injured. Men who have, by a lifetime of care and toil, accumulated property, have found themselves damaged in thousands by lawless scoundrels, countenanced and protected by a political party. They want the crime and its consequences held up to the condemnation and scorn of mankind. They know that silence would be next to a connivance at crime, and an invitation to its repetition; they know that the evil continues; that there is a class of population here—and an important one, too, to the growth and business of a city—that feel no security of either person or property; that they are leaving for other places, where they can enjoy the protection they don't expect here. This is the state of the case, and nothing better is to be expected until the people of Louisville come to their senses.

It is decidedly mean in us to publish the names of the men who have withdrawn from the Democrat. Prentiss grows virtuously indignant; he never did such a thing—for it; he once threatened what he could do, but scorned to do it. The only thing that deterred him was the maxim of Falstaff, that discretion is the better part of valor. If there is a mean thing in the world that he would do it, it would pay, the rest of mankind would like to know what that particular thing is. There are few things in doctrine or conduct that have been denounced as particularly mean and disgusting, which he has not advanced or practiced. Some years ago he denounced popular parties; he treated with indignant scorn the political procription of Catholics; he denounced Native Americanism; but he is now the champion of all these things. It was not long ago that he staked his credit on his seal for law and order, and particularly and fiercely denounced any newspaper accounts of cases before judicial tribunals; he got up old fogey opinions from foggy attorneys to support him in his seal; yet he has been lately, to party interest required, the persistent apologist of the vice mob that ever disgraced a city. We have convicted him of getting it up, of painting out its details, of ignoring all legal authority, and upholding and encouraging a lawless suppression of the legal vote of this city; then, when the deeds were done, and men were the objects of judicial examination, he pointed out his abuse upon them, undertook to magnify their crimes, and intended to invent them, whilst he excused the vile deeds of his hired ruffians, who have disgraced this city. It was but a few weeks ago that he published the details of testimony in a case that had been before the court on a writ of habeas corpus, and the party held to bay for answer to the charge before a jury; these details being, as we are now aware, of great interest to them, but when we publish the truth to the world, they are suddenly seized with virtuous indignation.

But this communication suggests some other inquiries: Why was this fire company organized exclusively of Know-Nothings, and "under the patronage of the oldest council of the order in this city"? Had the "oldest council in the city" the prospective arsons of the 6th of August in its eye, when it took the fire department under its patronage? It would seem so; and we all know how little effort was made by the fire department to extinguish the fire of that awful night.

We ask again what is the object of organizing fire companies exclusively of Know-Nothings? Is it the intention only to extingush fires when the property of Know-Nothings is likely to be destroyed? We can conceive no other possible motive.

Yet we are asked to be silent, and let such things pass for fear of injuring Louisville. Gentlemen merchants of Main street correct the evil, but don't dream that you can otherwise, frighten out its details, of ignorance all legal authority, and madden throughout with the heat of officers.

THEATRE.—There was an excellent house in attendance last night, and the performances were received with great delight. Miss Mitchell has made a decided hit, although she may not feel so. Our people are rather undemonstrative, and it requires considerable time for an artiste to learn their habits and tastes. To-night Miss Mitchell will make her last appearance in the "Queen of the Abruzzi," a "Lady's Stratagem," the performance to commence with "John Doe." Her Sailor's Hornpipe last night was most admirably executed, and called down shouts of applause. We advise all who have not yet seen her to go to-night; it will be repaid.

THE STEAMER ECLIPSE.—We received yesterday morning from Capt. E. T. Sturgeon, a dispatch dated Evansville, 25th inst., announcing that his boat would be at Portland ready to receive freight early this morning. The Eclipse returns to New Orleans, leaving the wharf at 5 o'clock this evening. Passengers and shipboard should not fail to be ready; the Eclipse always goes promptly on the day advertised. She is the finest craft that floats upon our waters, and is manned throughout with the best of officers.

PROSCRIPTION BEGUN!—The correspondence below, as well as the notices to discontinue, we anticipated. We differ widely with these gentlemen on the points at issue to allow any room for compromise. We are for law, right, and justice in Louisville first; without them no appliances will do any good, and we have no concessions to make. As to their support or opposition, it is a very insignificant master. We think they mislead if they suppose that this movement will do them or their cause any good, or us harm.

If these men had been as active for law and order last year as they are now, in trying to procure us for telling the truth about Louisville—when they know it is the truth—they might have done some good. They now place themselves on the side of mobocracy, and it is the effect of their conduct. So it will be understood here and elsewhere. The movement is in accordance with the suggestion of the Know-Nothing and mob organ of this city, the Louisville Journal, which has done more by its course to injure Louisville than all other causes combined, and which is now as powerless for good as it has been efficient in intent:

LOUISVILLE, April 19, 1856.

Messrs. HARNEY & HUGHES, Gentlemen: Will you please discontinue our subscription to your paper from this date, and oblige Yours respectfully, G. F. HAWLEY & CO.

W. W. MORRIS & CO., Gentlemen: We are very little concerned, however, about the affair. We are right, and are perfectly willing to let the public decide the master. Even Know-Nothings make sport of complaints from men who voluntarily and patricially put their fingers into a business, and got them burned by the operation.

MESSRS. HARNEY & HUGHES:—We are sorry to inform you that the Democrat published the names of the men who were with us, and who concurred with us, but made no mention of the Sag-Sights who have done the same thing.—Louisville Journal.

MESSRS. HARNEY & HUGHES:—What is it that after you have told so many unprofitable lies, you should tell this one?

A letter in the Cincinnati Times, known from home, gives some account of Mr. Fillmore. He was informed of his nomination, and the letter says he appeared "quite indifferent as to the honor intended to be showered upon him." It is not yet ascertained that he considers the instant any honor yet, and his indifference is perhaps not unaccountable; but he is the recipient of aristocratic honors. Lord Brougham presented him a copy of his literary works at Cannes, where his lordship was found waiting for him: "Wonderful! A pretty American candidate to be hobnobbing with lords foreigners, and a Know-Nothing quite excited about the honor his candidate has received!" What worse, the correspondent says:

THE SPECIAL favor shown Mr. Fillmore by the Pope, and the personal regard in which a statesman like himself is held by the Pope, has been manifested by the Pope himself, who has invited Mr. Fillmore to take a seat by his side at the dinner-table! Fillmore is under foreign influence—under Popish influence. Let the brethren pray for Fillmore.

It is suggested that the Know-Nothing nominees visited Rome to get salvation for the murderous deeds of the sixth of August last in this city.

Did Fillmore inform His Holiness the Pope whether or not he would accept the nomination of the Know-Nothing party?

Spring is coming! hear the drumming of the pheasant, all so pleasant; 'mid the budding of the trees, and the singing of the bees in the distant quiet wildwood, where the wretched steps of childhood, rock in summer's sultry hours, cooling and tiring, and the sturdy (if our muse be not too wordy), both unite in one socializing, singing in nature's name. Spring is coming, coming, on every side, scattering wide, see the farmer cast the grain; for he knows, as he throws the seed upon the ground, that with sunshine and with rain, the harvest will appear as in each former year.

A gentleman writing from Bloomfield, Louis, under date of 17th inst., states that "at our recent election for judge of the district court, the Know-Nothings polled 700 votes less in Davis County in this State than they did last fall. The Kentucky Horticultural Society also meets at the Exchange at 11 o'clock."

The individual who assures the Paris Citizen that the business of this city is better than it ever has been, and that the course of the Democrat is disapproved and denounced by the members of its own party, is either a knave or a fool. We are inclined to think he is both.

The editor of the Journal is exercised a good deal about our publishing the names of men who have undertaken openly to proscribe us. He has told several falsehoods already, and published another yesterday morning. He says that amongst those who have proscribed us were men of both parties. This is false. There is not a Democrat amongst them; if there is, let the editor name him. The Democratic party here unanimously sustain our course. This is the state of the case, and nothing better is to be expected until the people of Louisville come to their senses.

The writer in the Journal of yesterday, over the signature of "Washington No. 8," says: "The American Eagle fire company, No. 8, was ordered on yesterday by the Mayor to remove from the house which they occupy. Why this course is pursued towards a company who are exclusively (in its membership) members of the American Order, and was organized under the patronage of the oldest Council of the Order in this city, is strange."

The writer does not pretend to urge any other objection to the act of the Mayor, than that which we have quoted above. It seems strange to him that Know-Nothings should be called to account for anything. Such a communication would be amusing rather than otherwise, but for the terrible commentary it affords upon the history of our city for the last eight months. Crimes the most damning that ever disgraced this or any other country have been committed openly in the face of all. The perpetrators are well known, and no effort is made to bring them to punishment; but, on the contrary, their murder of men and burning of houses, are solemnly indorsed and approved by the Common Council. One man was indicted for one of the numerous murders of the 6th of August. With the trial of the 8th of May, it provides that the Committee may be ready to proceed with the general meeting of the citizens of Louisville in regard to the subject of the trials.

"The Ascension of Christ" will be the subject of the discourse by the Rev. G. W. Smiley tomorrow (Saturday), at 11 o'clock, A. M., in the Third Street M. E. Church. The public are invited.

"The frame house and lot 17½ by 120, on Grayson, between Eighth and Ninth streets, was sold at auction yesterday evening by Samuel Hyatt, auctioneer, for $750. He sells four houses and lots on next Tuesday. See advertisement in the paper.

"The Novelty Iron Works, at Rochester, N. Y., were destroyed by fire yesterday. 100 persons were deprived of employment by this calamity.
